There are now indications that the telephone line to my residence may now be tapped, and that a covert means to monitor conversation may have been established. These indications have originated from abrupt and erratic telephone service on Feb 03, Feb 04 and Feb 05 2001 to my residence, which included symptoms of repeated termination of conversation in mid-progress, failed connections, emergence of dial tones midstream and various clicks and anomalous sounds within the transmissions. These patterns were also reported by third parties, as well as having been witnessed from my residence.

Since that time, the telephone has generally restored itself to an apparent norm, with the exception that conversations are now discretely, repeatedly and intermittently interrupted with periodic clicks and momentary pauses of silence within the telephone transmissions.

These facts are reported strictly from an observational point of view, in an effort to present an honest record of those actions that may have been taken. If information to the contrary presents itself, or if a change in these circumstances occur, I will promptly report that information with equal earnestness.

Sincerely,

Clifford E Carnicom
